

Stephanie Greathouse

Stephanie Greathouse began sculpting in 2018 in the quaint lakeside town of Melrose, Florida. She previously lived in Brooksville for eleven years, and her eldest son, sister, and parents still reside there. She spent many sunny days of the past on the banks of the Weeki Wachee River enjoying mesmerizing mermaid performances and kayak trips with gentle manatees navigating near her boat. Perhaps these experiences led her to a love of the water and it's beautiful creatures, both real and fantastical .

As the stresses of life pressed upon her, a new love of art persuaded her down a path of escape and delight. Now, she spends time sculpting on her porch overlooking the cypress trees and breezy shores of beautiful Lake Santa Fe. She also sculpts in a small she shed that serves as a clay station where artists of Mossman Hall Art Gallery commune.

Stephanie's travels lead her to beaches and waterways near and far. From local beaches and rivers to island travels in Costa Rica, the shores inspire her aquatic creativity.

Stephanie's art brings her peace and serenity, and that she enjoys sharing the love of her creations inspired by reality and fantasy of the water with friends who desire a touch of the sea.
